"Fuck the EU": US regime change operation in Ukraine exposed in leaked diplomatic phone call

Any doubts about the Obama administration's real intentions in Ukraine should have been dispelled by the taped conversation between a top State Department official, Victoria Nuland (wife of leading neocon Robert Kagan), and the US ambassador in Kiev. The media predictably focused on the source of the "leak" and on Nuland's verbal "gaffe"—"Fuck the EU." But the essential revelation was that high-level US officials were plotting to "midwife" a new, anti-Russian Ukrainian government by ousting or neutralizing its democratically elected president—that is, a coup. (Read "Distorting Russia - How the American media misrepresent Putin, Sochi and Ukraine" by Stephen Cohen on The Nation website).

The discussion between the two US officials included a detailed review of which right-wing opposition figures Washington is working to install in office, and how it is using the United Nations to rubber-stamp the operation. While Germany and other European powers have worked closely with the Obama administration in promoting the violent protests against

The utter criminality of Washington's drive to install a pliant regime in Kiev sharply emerges in Nuland and Pyatt's discussion of Oleh Tyahnybok, the leader of the neo-fascist All-Ukrainian Union (Svoboda) party. Nuland describes Tyahnybok as one of the "big three" within the opposition leadership.

These remarks confirm that there is no confusion whatsoever within the Obama administration that it is working in partnership with fascist movements in Ukraine.
